The American people have a genius for big hotels, upon the erection and adornment of which they spend immense sums of money. The Palace Hotel, at San Francisco, is said to have cost six million dollars, and is the finest hotel in the world. Several Sydney men who had made up their minds to stay at the Palace, were mysteriously assured by opposition runners that typhoid fever was raging there—a place of intelligence given to all new arrivals; but they were not to be frightened by this ruse, and clinged to their risk. The result was, the Palace, thoughtfully given to San Francisco visitors, has proved to be a grand success. It has been organized on a scale of great magnificence, and is in many respects unique. The structure covers nearly 100,000 square feet in one of the business centers of the city, and it is seven stories high. The carriage entrance from New Montgomery-street is round a fountain at one end of an immense central court, paved with black and white marble and roofed with glass from the topmost story. The view of the interior from this quadrangle is exceedingly rich and effective, more particularly at night when the verandahs on each story are illuminated by several hundred standard lights from the ground floor to the highest tier. There are spacious staircases at each end of the building, and the elevators are also there, all placed at convenient intervals. These are furnished with velvet cushions and mirrors, and the journey from the bottom to the top or any of the intervening floors occupies but a few seconds. Every room has a free-place, clothes closet, and toilet room, and to every two rooms there is a bath, to which as well as to the toilet rooms hot and cold water are supplied. There are 755 rooms exclusively for the use of guests, most of them being 20 feet square, and none less than 16. The rooms are well lighted and ventilated, richly carpeted, and elegantly furnished; the expenditure upon hangings, mirrors, upholstery in velvet, gas burnings, &c., having been lavish. There is a pneumatic dispatch tube for cards, messages, and parcels, and every room is fitted with an annunciator bell, so that each may be kept at the hotel at all hours of the day and night. The verandahs are embellished with statues and vases, in which palms, ferns, and other plants of graceful foliage thrive, well under the glass roof. Four artesian wells supply a reservoir of 630,000 gallons, and the apparatus for the extinction of fires includes nearly 50,000 feet of hose. In every room and passage-way there is a thermostatic bulb by which any extra degree of heat is registered on a dial at the office, the exact locality being indicated. There are twenty-three sets of gas-pipes in the building, and several diamond jets. More than 2000 ventilating pipes open on the roof, and the piping for various purposes in the building measures nearly seventy miles. The arrangements for washing, wringing, and mangling clothes by steam are most ingenious and extensive. By means of an engine it is to be found in the laundry and storeroom of the basement, and on the marble floors of the basement, and on the dining-rooms and elsewhere an African negro mounted guard, receiving orders at stated intervals, so as to give a continuous service from six o'clock in the morning till 12 at night. In the spacious and sumptuously furnished dining-rooms of the hotel you meet with people from all parts of America, and there is a large proportion of visitors who come from Germany, France, or Italy. San Francisco boasts that it is the most cosmopolitan city in the world, and probably with a large amount of truth. Dinner of a Sunday evening at the Palace is not without its attractions for those who admire display. The dardies—those who are arrayed in full evening costume—give themselves all the airs and airs; and the toilettes of the ladies are superbly rich, and in wonderfully good taste. However may be freed from the economy of "socialism," it strikes the eye that the "Raffles" must find that what he gains in rent and servants' wages is more than lost upon business and drapers. Ladies will dress, and be sensitive of public dining seems to afford irresistible stimulus to competition.

San Francisco, this morn, is decidedly speculating in the immense yields of silver and gold in the Comstock lead having completely turned the heads of three-fourths of the population. Truly a servant girl or an office boy would find it no more a speculator in stock; but the condition of the community for the moment seems to be feverishly un-healthy. I went to the principal Stock Exchange one morning to see the method of doing in the finest blocks, and there are commonly crowds of people outside and upon the steps. The cause of all this excitement is to be found in the great yields of the Consolidated Virginia Mine, which I was told had been dividing 1,800,000 dollars a month for the last ten months, and nearly half the percentage of ore is found to be gold. The share lists, however, show that for every mine that pays a dividend, there are fifty which yield nothing but disappointment; and it is more than doubtful whether the disturbing effect on the industry and trade of the country is not counterbalanced by the fortunes of the few. The staff of the Consolidated Virginia Board alone, last year, amounted to 2,235,000 dollars' worth of mining stock. There are one or two men, two or three years ago, were keeping a retail grocery, who are now reputed to be worth 50,000,000 dollars. Silver in San Francisco is plentiful enough, and it is quite as common to see a enough of silver ingots emptied into the vaults of the Nevada Bank as it is in Sydney to see a load of copper or tin taken to Bradley, Newton, and Lamb's. Silver is almost becoming a drug in the market. Merchants will not accept it in payment for goods except at a heavy discount, to which the retail traders into whose tills the silver coinage chiefly flows, are obliged to submit. The production of gold and silver during 1875 is set down at 90,000,000 dollars, and the coinage of silver at the San Francisco Mint for that year was 32,069,000 dollars. There is some reason to expect that the United States Government will begin to resume specie payments by the introduction of a silver currency for the present fractional currency, i. e., paper of less value than the dollar. If this be done, it will absorb an immense quantity of silver from Nevada. The Eastern markets are pretty well supplied with trade dollars, and the price of silver in Europe has been on the decline. If San Francisco sends anything to the Centennial, silver will be her chief exhibit. It is said that Messrs. Flood and O'Brien, of the Nevada Bank, intend to send 10,000,000 dollars' worth of silver bars from the Consolidated Virginia, which will require a long line of railway cars to transport it.

Of the shipping interests of San Francisco none are more important than the Pacific Mail Company, whose magnificent steamships carry through the Golden Gate so large a proportion of the trade of the northern Pacific. Their ships gather up the trade of the northern coast as far as Vancouver's Island; and it will not be long before the merchants of San Francisco will be pushing a trade in heavy woolsens to the north-west with Siberia. All the productions of southern California and Mexico are carried northwards by the Panama route, and a line of steamers runs regularly along the western coast of South America. Their thorough trade with China and Japan, and with New York via Panama, is large, and finds employment for many first-class steamships. Their premises in San Francisco cover an area of about seven acres, and their shipping facilities are among the best, and most perfect which could be devised. Their principal wharf is 1200 feet long, by 100 feet broad. Powerful stationary and portable steam-engines are placed at each of the six berths, and the loading or unloading of the ships can be effected with great rapidity. The wharf is large enough to accommodate 4000 tons of goods without piling up above the floor level, and the whole of it is roofed in. Lines of railway run along the wharf; and in cases where quick despatch is required the cargo has been loaded direct into the steamer, and if it has been in a few hours on its way to New York, the business of unloading and forwarding inland, going on simultaneously. The precautions which have been taken against fire are extensive and complete—hydrants, steam-engines, Babcock's extinguishers, and every known appliance being handily placed throughout their premises, and can be made available at a moment's notice. With such resources as are provided to put out fire, it is impossible to suppose an extensive conflagration could ever take place. Where vessels require quick despatch, it is important that the facilities for coaling should be as perfect as possible. In Sydney this is generally a very tedious and dirty business, but not so here. The coal yards of the Company give storage room for the coal, and the elevated lifts and the railway lead from the colliery with and from the coal yard, at each of which points the steam-powered machinery for lifting the waggons and sales for weighing them. The lines are laid along the outside and under the roof of the wharf to the coal shoots which are fixed at each of the berths, and the waggons filled with coal are drawn by a very diminutive

MAY 10.

Every one is wondering what has become of the winter winds this season, as, although their appearance with all the invigorating effect is not uncommon in the middle of May without a sign of these brisk and delightful breezes and their accompanying brightness and clear atmosphere. Forty-eight hours continue to pass without a sign of a strong wind, which it has long been a stranger; and the weather being still mild to warmth, there is a good spring in the grass, of which there will now probably be a good crop. Winter sowing, planting and transplanting and all sorts of horticultural operations, which are best performed with waning warmth and moderate moisture, are now in full blast, and the gardener, professional and amateur, is rejoicing in unusual success. There is, however, one much important work which has been in abeyance.

There is nothing exceptional in our being short of domestic servants, as all the colonies seem to suffer from the same cause—really good female domestics being extremely scarce. In the United States, and in the country colonies much the same tale, and skilful servants there can command quite as high wages as the colonies. It is not therefore surprising that the demand for such servants is so great, and that not a superior article, and that beyond a certain amount of bone and muscle which enables them to carry a pail or wield a scrubbing brush, we get very little, if any, of the more refined qualities of public mind, in this direction, which, contributing to the general improvement of the hearth. When we learn therefore that in Hongkong a bill has been passed which will facilitate the engagement of skilful domestic servants for the colonies, it is not surprising to find that the demand for such servants, and although there are a great many people who would not in any case employ this sort of labour, and others who would be indisposed to incur the outlay of such a bill, yet the bill, if passed, will probably be plenty left to avail of the altered state of the law which makes it apparently quite as simple to engage servants in Hongkong as in the United Kingdom, and which will, in consequence, have since been accustomed to the presence of coloured servants more than one nationality in our midst, occupied in various ways, and in most phases of life, commercial and domestic.

But the presence of Chinese men is so common in many of our public places, and in the gold-fields or in gardens, as sheep-sheepers and merchants, that much as people differ as to the advisability of permitting them to come in greater numbers, yet the presence of the best servants in the world, and when kindly treated, will be found to be very strongly to their employers; while they are found to be a patient good-tempered race, comparing favourably, in their freedom from vice, with the general run of the servants of other countries. The facilities will be availed of in the Australian colonies it is difficult to foresee, and the bill in question has been reserved for the signification of the Queen's assent, and it may be some time before we can have no doubt that if the path is made clear, for the purpose, the Chinese will soon appear in our households as a new phase of Mongolian citizenship in Australia.

The greatly peculiar question, therefore, of how far and under what terms the Chinese may be employed, becomes still more urgent; and now, if ever, is the time for its settlement, when it is proposed to incorporate these people, with their many contradictory qualities, into the body of the colony, and to place them, as they are before us, where they almost bid fair to out-allocate the native-born American, and where their hold is now so firm as to make their exclusion simply an impossibility.

An invitation has been sent to Messrs. W. Wallis, E. L. Montebello, and Julia Joubert, of the Australasian Society of New South Wales, to act as Commissioners for the Queensland National Association; and the latter two have been especially requested to promote the interests of the latter body, by using his influence to induce exhibits to be sent from New South Wales to the Inter-colonial Exhibition to be held in Brisbane in August next. It is understood that the Queensland National Association, in connection with the Exhibition, has much interest in this matter, and on our maiden effort; but, apart from any advantage to be derived by either of the Associations referred to by the Government, it has been found that the entente cordiale between the two colonies, which is the result of their intercourse, cannot fail to be strengthened by the friendly rivalry which is created by these Exhibitions, and that, as they are upon terms which facilitate in every possible manner the interchange of exhibits of all classes from the other, under the watchful eye of special representatives, present by invitation and as honoured guests on the occasions, the result will be a mutual benefit to both, and the care of the exhibits from Sydney; and, with his great experience, there can be no doubt that by his compliance with our Society's request he will, in terms of the entente cordiale, confer a benefit upon our infant Association.

The show of the Ipswich Society has passed off well, despite the drawback of some days of heavy rain immediately preceding it, and the roads, including that from the city, have been better than for some time, although bad condition. The exhibits, owing partly no doubt to this cause, were principally local, and, as far as they went, were good, especially the horses. The show was, however, not so successful as the best in the colony, but naturally fails to accomplish its object, the "Queensland Pastoral and Agricultural Society" would appear to improve. There will be no doubt that in the future, in holding a merely local show so near to the scene of operation of the Inter-colonial exhibitions; and it is hoped that this Society, with one or two others, may be induced to merge into the larger and better organised undertakings of the Inter-colonial Association, and that their promoters would have a better sphere of usefulness.

The election for the Logan has resulted in the defeat of Mr. Maclean, and the victory of Mr. Blake in planning. The lawyer, however, of the latter class, the numbers being—Maclean, 208; Blake, 197; the Mowat court-martial here being nowhere. There will not, however, materially affect to come in, in the effect of the single electorate system is to make the demands upon the central Government for roads,

SOCIAL AFFAIRS IN ENGLAND.

Of course, thanks to the electric telegraph, you have heard of the Queen's visit to the London Hospital, and the intense enthusiasm thereby occasioned among the inhabitants of the surrounding districts, who turned out in hundreds of thousands for the purpose of welcoming the sovereign of whom they had heard so much as seen so little. The newspapers have carefully recorded the proceedings of the day, which were of an almost unparalleled character. The Whitechapel roads, who formed an immense multitude, receiving their royal visitor with a heartiness which showed that they were not of the class of those who, when they least, their hearts were in the right places. We have seen many popular receptions of the Queen, but none more enthusiastic in the feelings and enthusiasm than this, which was a most successful demonstration of the character of the English people. For probably the first time in her life the Queen passed in review the myriads of Englishmen, who are the backbone of the Empire, and who are the most loyal and devoted subjects of the Crown. Trade and industrial affairs in the north do not appear very encouraging. In the cotton trade, there are indications that it is likely to become more so before many weeks have elapsed. In Bolton and Preston large numbers of looms are standing idle, and unemployed workmen are more numerous than any time since the cotton famine. Now is the time to attempt the experiment suggested by Mr. L. Fane. De Salis of bringing cargoes of immigrants from here in return for shipments of frozen meat. But whether the people would leave home is a question yet undecided. They appear to have great faith in a speedy revival of manufacturing prosperity, and might entertain an objection to seeking employment in a country where they are better off. In the Midlands, where the coal and iron trades are in a most depressed condition, the colonial immigration agents would be very successful, for the unemployed are not only very close to the colonies, but they have confidence in being enabled to obtain employment in the colonies. The answer is simple. The cost of a journey, with their wives and families, to London, for the purpose of obtaining employment in the colonies, is beyond their means. The American Immigration Agents, who are now in the principle of Mahomet going to the mountain. Directly there is a dearth of employment in any of the manufacturing or mining districts, the American agents would be very successful in the colonies. Hence the popularity of America as an emigration country for the English nation.

Emigration would be far more effective and regular if the colonies would co-operate in the manner suggested by Mr. De Salis, whose proposal was anticipated in these letters several years ago. If a scheme could be carried into effect, a central emigration office could be established, which would go all in search of employment and information respecting the colonies. The office would be situated in London, and would be in communication with the colonial governments. The office would be in communication with the colonial governments. The office would be in communication with the colonial governments.

ODDS AND ENDS FROM THE OLD WORLD.

The Snec affair has been a walk-over for Ministers, as expected. The Opposition not even venturing to divide, the debate is only worth mentioning as suggesting a growing antagonism between Mr. Gladstone and Lord Salisbury. The Government have been in a very awkward position, and the Opposition have been in a very awkward position. The Government have been in a very awkward position, and the Opposition have been in a very awkward position.

In commercial and financial circles the principal topics is the depreciation in the value of silver, the effects of which are now beginning to be experienced in this country. In a lecture delivered before the Royal Society, Mr. J. B. Stewart, read a paper, in which he pointed out that for the purpose of making gold the chief standard of value the price of silver must be restricted. The effect of this limitation is that comparatively little silver can be used, and so while the total circulation is 92 millions there are but 15 millions of silver. Hence our silver coinage is taken money, and at the present price of silver, 22 shillings per ounce, a shilling of the nominal value of 12d. is worth only 10d. in the market. In the present time there are 20 millions of surplus silver in Europe which must be destroyed, and the question was what to become of it. India and the East can absorb but a limited percentage of the amount of the best India has already absorbed 240 millions. And there was this consideration that if the price of silver falls much lower it will not only cease to be a legal tender money, but it will also be impossible to maintain the value of the coinage. It is a question which has been much discussed, and it is a question which has been much discussed.

London is very full, and has been working hard at gaiety in spite of a Court mourning. Musical entertainments are especially popular, and the theatres are very full. The Queen's visit to the London Hospital was a most successful demonstration of the character of the English people. For probably the first time in her life the Queen passed in review the myriads of Englishmen, who are the backbone of the Empire, and who are the most loyal and devoted subjects of the Crown.

sum in aid of the funds. This proposal, however, is indignantly rejected, as "fraudulent" and "untenable," and much more of the same kind.
